Choosing a Research Topic

Idea Books
Looking for lists of ideas to browse through? Try some of these:

10,000 Ideas for Term Papers, Projects… ref LB 1047.3 L35 1998
The Debateabase Book ref PN 4181.D3945 2007

Reference Books
Reference books are useful for both overviews of a topic and for detailed information. Subject encyclopedias focus on one broad topic, such as: environment, food, violence, psychology, etc. Depending on your interests, you might get topics ideas by browsing through books such as:

Encyclopedia of African American Culture and History E185.E54 2006
Encyclopedia of Food and Culture GT 2850.E53 2003
Encyclopedia of Civil Liberties in America JC 599.U5 E53 2003
Encyclopedia of Bioethics QH 332.E52 2004
Biotechnology; Changing Life through Science TP 248.218 .B56 2007

Series Books
Series such as, Opposing Viewpoints; Current Controversies; At Issue; Information Series; Contemporary World Issues, etc. are very useful for exploring different aspects of a topic or issue. Look for them by title in the online catalog. You can also search for series books on a particular subject by using the “keyword” search. Enter the series title, followed by the topic you are interested in. For example, type opposing viewpoints abortion.

BOOKS:
Looking for books on your subject is an excellent way to get started with research. You can search the online catalog to find books, videos, DVDs, etc. for information on your topic. Type in a broad topic as a subject search; often it will be subdivided into specific categories, such as:

Global warming – government policy
Education, bilingual – social aspects
Obesity – economic aspects

Or, try a keyword search using words that express your idea, such as:

Media and gender Television and children
Cars and environment Alcohol and driving
Education and testing Clean air
DATABASES
Magazine, journal, and newspaper articles provide current information on thousands of topics. Many of them also provide a link to listings of potential research topics. You can select databases according to the subject areas that interest you.

Academic OneFile
Magazines and academic journals can be found here. Browse using the “Subject Guide Search” to find major topics subdivided in many categories.

African American Experience and Latino American Experience
Browse the homepage of the databases; click on “Idea Exchange” for more ideas

Biography in Context
This database has thousands of articles on famous people. Click on “Browse People” to and select categories such as profession, ethnic group, historical time period, etc.

Global Issues in Context
Global issues, conflicts, and events are covered here. A wide variety of subject areas are included, such as sociology, current events, civics, politics, science, economics, cultural/religious issues, women’s studies, human rights, and much more. Click on “Browse Issues & Topics” for ideas; you can also browse by geographical regions.

GREENR (Global Reference on the Environment, Energy and Natural Resources)
The focus here is green technology and issues concerning the environment, sustainability and more. GREENR is interactive and current, allowing users to navigate issue, organization, and country portals. Click on “Browse Issues & Topics” for a comprehensive list of topics covered.

Issues & Controversies
This database specializes in current controversial issues. You can browse through the “Recent Controversies”, “Issues by Subject”, or “All Issues” links on the home page.

Opposing Viewpoints in Context
This database has a wealth of resources – magazine articles, academic journals, newspapers, essays, statistics, websites, audio/video, and images. Click on the Browse Issues tab on the black tool bar for a link to a list of controversial issues.

Science In Context
Explore today's most significant science topics by accessing full-text magazines, academic journals, news articles, experiments, images, videos, audio files, and links to evaluated websites. Click on “Browse Topics” for a comprehensive listing of topics in the database.

Web Sites

Internet Public Library
Click on “Resources by Subject” to browse the subject directory. The websites listed here have been evaluated for quality and currency.